Guyana’s Republic Celebrations - 2014
National leaders come together for 44TH Republic anniversary flag raising ceremony

FEBRUARY 24, 2014 | BY KNEWS |

In spite of Guyana’s turbulent political past and the recent struggles for agreement on nationalistic issues between the country’s political leaders, yesterday’s Republic Anniversary Flag Raising Ceremony, served as a most sobering reminder of just how important it is for all citizens to channel their energies toward the development of the nation.

The momentous occasion which heralded Guyana’s 44th year of having attaining Republic status, was the first event to officially start off the Mash Day celebrations, was done in exceptionally fine style. The activity commenced at precisely 6:15am, with a parade of officers from the Joint Services who marched the almost 400 metres from the Ministry of Home Affairs on Brickdam to Parliament Buildings.

On lookers who stood outside continued to watch from a distance as they too were not only impressed by the officers but most importantly proud of them. The Parliament building itself was appropriately decorated with the bright colours of the National Flag, The Golden Arrow Head, which could be seen on its frontal exterior.

The event was well attended by members of the Government and Opposition as well as the Diplomatic Corps, and several Heads of local agencies. The Prime Minister, Samuel Hinds and President Donald Ramotar were given special salutes by the officers of the Guyana Defence Force.

They were welcomed at the Parliament’s entrance by a special party which included the Minister of Culture, Youth and Sports, Dr. Frank Anthony. Following the special salutes, the Guard Commander then escorted President Ramotar to inspect the Guard of Honour comprising ranks of the Police and Defence Forces. After this was completed, the Golden Arrow Head was hoisted. But just before this, those in attendance sang along to some of Guyana’s National Songs. When the flag was finally hoisted at precisely 7:30am, it was accompanied by the recital of the National Pledge.

The moment itself also reinforced the point that apart from the glitter and glamour, and the frolic that would normally occur after the peaceful event, there is a lot to be thankful for. It also served for some in attendance, as a reminder of the ever so important need for our leaders to work harmoniously in helping to propel Guyana’s growth and reduce the political instability. Guyana at the Crossroads  -  Politically and Economically

Guyana’s Politics Dead-end

Most Guyanese, at home and abroad, would like to see positive change in the political climate. The country has been in turmoil for over 50 years. The 1980 Constitution, whereby a minority party is the government, is a real problem as Parliament, with its majority is in direct conflict with the Executive presidency. In the Constitution, granted after Independence, this impasse would have been avoided as coalitions could have formed the Government.

The PPP Government is now talking about new General Elections to gain a majority parliament so that their policies and spending cannot be blocked. New elections may not change the deadlocked Parliament as the PPP might not win a majority, so the conflicts will continue if there is no compromise.

Local Government Elections

The Constitution mandates that Local Government Elections should be held every three years. The last elections were held in 1994. Why no elections?

The pressure for Local government elections is increasing. The ABC countries (America, Britain, Canada) have been calling for Local Government Elections. They feel that governance at the local level should be a priority in a democracy to give responsibility to ‘locals’ in managing their affairs. The Government says the country is not ready for local elections, as the populace needs “voter education”.

Money Laundering Laws

Also, Guyana has two economies. The underground economy is over 60%. It flourishes mainly with smuggling, illicit drugs, unreported gold-mining and logging and money laundering. Much investment is financed by laundered funds from remittances. The fear is that with enforceable money laundering laws that these transfers will be monitored and reduced.

Also, with the new laws, persons may have to show the source of their “investments”. There is a belief that there is a mad scramble now by many to set themselves up for the new reality... thus the massive building boom before the laws are implemented. The real arguments in Parliament are to ensure that the laws are effective in their implementation.

On February 23, 2014 Guyana celebrated its 44th anniversary as a Republic. On May 26, 2014, it will celebrate its 48th year as an independent state.

While there was the usual pomp and ceremony with the raising of the flag in front of Parliament Buildings and the revelry in the streets for Mashramani, there was a feeling of unease as to where Guyana was heading as a country. The deadlock in Parliament and conflict with the Executive President is ongoing.

Visually, there is a building boom in the country, fueled mainly by gold mining and increased remittances from the USA, Canada and the UK. Many are investing in hard assets rather than cash, fearing inflation and a depreciated Guyana dollar in the future. This fear is already becoming a reality.

The Venezuela political and economic meltdown will surely affect Guyana in the future irrespective of whether President Maduro goes or remains in power. The PetroCaribe oil arrangements with its low interest loans and attractive payment plans could be scrapped or adjusted, thus increasing oil prices.

The evolution of Mashramani - By Jairo Rodrigues

By Jairo Rodrigues - March 1, 2014 Stabroek News

Some people are arguing that there is no longer a Mashramani, not even in the traditional sense of the word. Last week I questioned why we really celebrate the actual holiday if we do not have much to celebrate after having done little to no work but this week I want us to look at the evolution of our local celebration of the carnival festival.

There I said it 'carnival' festival – that single word can cause uproar in society. Mashramani is not carnival, yes; we know that but Mashramani is a carnival festival. What do you call the celebration then if you will argue it is not, a road party?

Mix culture, folklore, costumes, music, stories, arts and throw it into a pot of celebration and festivities and you have yourselves a carnival. More so, include a moving festival parade and you have a carnival parade (seems familiar?) Dictionary.com describes a carnival as: “Any merrymaking, revelry, or festival, as a program of sports or entertainment. A fair, celebration, fete, holiday and more traditionally, the season immediately preceding Lent, often observed with merrymaking; Shrovetide.”

Carnival

There are many sites online that confirm this. Wikipedia is not an accepted academic source but the vast knowledge of a carnival, including lists of where it is celebrated and why, on that site is impeccable.

Yes, Trinidad and Tobago still celebrates this tradition before Lent and it has no name for its festival but carnival. Guyana, meanwhile, choosing to celebrate the birth of the Republic held a carnival festival but under the name ‘Mashramani’ which is Arawak-native for... well you know by now, it’s repeated so many times that it’s becoming a bit clichéd to say “A celebration after hard work.”

Even so this festival has swayed away from its original purpose. We no longer celebrate our people and our work but use it for merriment, music and alcohol, paying no attention to the annual themes, the calypso competitions, and the list goes on and on. Today’s Mashramani looks nothing like it did in 1970. Then we have the J’Ouvert parties and the Mardi Gras. J’Ouvert, unlike Mardi Gras, is actually Caribbean born and as Guyana always boasts, being the bridge and blessed to be both Caribbean and South American, of course we picked up their cultures too and merged it into our own.

I am told that J’Ouvert has always been a celebration as long as Mashramani was in existence but only for the past two years or so did they give it a traditional name. ‘J’Ouvert’ is a contraction of the French Jour ouvert, or dawn/day break since a group of people would party all night until dawn. Yes, we Guyanese have been partying all night for years but it has only been recently that we titled these parties to promote the carnival-like atmosphere and to become more in tune with the Caribbean traditions and culture.

Mardi Gras

Mardi Gras on the other hand means ‘Fat Tuesday’ in the French Language. We celebrate it any day with the J’Ouvert festivities. Mardi Gras is the name of a carnival, celebrated by the French who partied and ate excessively before the Lenten season where one would be required to fast from food and other merriments. Mardi Gras often involves wild parties where people would dress in costumes depicting folklore creatures, throw powder, paint their skins and wear bright colours. We Guyanese have morphed the two French-named festivals: J’Ouvert and Mardi Gras into a single celebration on the night of February 22 into the morning of February 23.

Maybe because we were once colonized by the French, it makes it easier for us to bring those festivals into our local Republic festivities, or maybe it’s because we’re foreign minded. Perhaps.

Guyana Foundation distributes Solar-powered light kits at Breezy Point

March 12, 2014 - KNEWS
Over the weekend of March 8-9, 2014, a team from the Guyana Foundation visited ‘Breezy Point’ where solar-powered light kits were donated to needy families in the area.

Breezy Point is a village situated on the bank of a GuySuco canal, between Brusche Dam and Coldingen Dam, East Coast of Demerara. This village is accessed over makeshift bridges built by residents from scrap wood. There is no running water in the community and no electricity. Many of the children and elderly live in very poor conditions.

The Guyana Foundation started working in the village several months ago, donating solar-powered light kits to needy families in the area. During this recent trip, the entity completed the distribution of light kits to every home in the area.

According to residents, the light kits have been most useful. They have enabled school children to study after dark. Also, since the light receptacles are portable, residents are able to use them to cross the bridges at night, to use outdoor toilet facilities, and much more.

To commemorate International Women’s Day, the Guyana Foundation team also visited some of the elderly ladies in the community – like Miss Emelda who is 73 years old. She has twenty children, fifty-six grandchildren, and six great grandchildren. Miss Emelda, stricken by poverty and ill-health, still managed to welcome and thank the Guyana Foundation team for the gifts brought to her community.

Party Trucks

Party Trucks: Pulse Entertainment, Hits and Jams and Banks DIH to name the most vibrant and most talked about. Party trucks are the physical evidence of how Mashramani has devolved from a festival of people and celebration to drinking and partying.

I can understand Pulse and HJ, they are entertainment companies, but Banks DIH has for years ‘Mashed’ through the streets of Georgetown, sponsoring the local carnival, and winning top prizes for its costumes and bands. This year it went the party truck route.

Carib Beer (Ansa McAl) and Banks DIH have always rivalled each other for best costumes, largest band and promoting the Mashramani atmosphere but neither came out this year as per tradition; Carib was nonexistent and Banks had a party truck. This spells trouble for the future.

The evidence is there that Mashramani is no more and that Mashramani Carnival is the evolution of the Republic Day festival.

But there is the argument of globalization that sums up all I have written about the evolution (and devolution) of Mashramani. Basically the world has now become so interlinked that it is a global village. It is okay for us to evolve our local carnival into a more familiarized festival to the rest of the world’s festivals. We can’t stay in the 70s forever.

We always ask for tourists to come during this time of year so maybe we should have placed the world on the streets in Guyana. But while we have done this we have lost the origins of Mashramani, and so we have lost ourselves. Source link: http://www.stabroeknews.com/ani/print/

Red Thread's Karen De Souza cops Caribbean Award for Excellence

(TRINIDAD GUARDIAN).-- February 22, 2014

Guyana’s Karen De Souza of the women and children’s rights organisation Red Thread– is among three persons who are 2014 laureates of the Anthony N Sabga Caribbean Awards for Excellence.

De Souza was awarded for Public and Civic Contributions.

The others are Professor Liam Teague of Trinidad in the category of Arts and Letters and Dr. Richard Robertson of St. Vincent and the Grenadines in the field of Science & Technology.

Up to 2010, the awards were made biennially but in 2011 the Caribbean Awards for Excellence became an annual event. Since 2006, when the first laureates were named, several sets of laureates have been presented with prizes: in 2006, 2008, 2010, 2011 and annually thereafter in Port-of-Spain.

The goal of the Ansa Caribbean Awards for Excellence is to recognise significant Caribbean achievement, to encourage and to support the pursuit of excellence by Caribbean people, for the benefit of the region.

This is the first such recognition programme of its kind. It is privately funded, free of political and other influence, and offers tangible, significant benefit to the laureates. It is the most noteworthy philanthropic initiative by a Caribbean organisation in recent times.

US embassy honours Guyanese Woman of Courage

Gayanese civil society activist, Zenita Nicholson was on Wednesday, March 12, awarded the United States (US) embassy’s first International Woman of Courage Award for her work against homophobia and fighting for women’s rights.

“This award is about courage and leadership. Zenita Nicholson embodies these principles and exemplifies the traditions of personal freedom and equality that remain shared values between Guyana and the United States,” said US Embassy Charge d’Affaires, Bryan Hunt before presenting her with the award.

Inscribed are the words “In Recognition of your exceptional courage and leadership in advocating for women’s rights and empowerment and raising public awareness to protect the human rights of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender persons.” The award, in recognition of International Women’s Day that was observed on March 8, was established in 2007 by the Secretary of State to honour women globally who have exemplified exceptional courage and leadership in advocating for human rights, women’s equality and social progress often at great risk.

Nicholson was also credited for her work to improve the conditions of women and children through advocacy and education. The lobbyist is a volunteer with the Society Against Sexual Orientation Discrimination (SASOD) and Country Coordinator for Caribbean Vulnerable Communities/ PANCAP Global Fund Round 9 “Vulnerable Groups” project.

In her acceptance speech, Nicholson said the award was testimony to the support of others including her mother and children. She said her advocacy has been inspired by the LGBT community in Guyana—“a country where adult same-sex intimacy and cross-dressing are criminalized and highly stigmatized”, “those whose daily lives are filled with violence, rejection, abuse and discrimination” and “those who are being denied their rights to work, health, education and freedom of expression, and other basic rights that many of us take for granted.”

She dedicated the award to the LGBT Guyanese who fight daily struggles for their very existence, without recognition, reward or recompense. She also accepted the award in memories of Charcoe, Tiffany, Darshanie and others “whose lives were snuffed out due to hate and stigma”.

Nicholson has lobbied and engaged government, local politicians, the United Nations Human Rights Committee, Guyana’s Committee on Rights of the Child and the Inter American Commission on Human Rights to improve the lot of the LGBT community, children and women.

Paving the way for foreign drug lords

IS GUYANA BEING TAKEN OVER BY NON-NATIONALS?

It really should come as no surprise that Brazilian bandits are operating in the Lethem area. What is not known is if they have engaged in similar activities in other parts of the country. We recall the murders of two serving members of the police force allegedly by non-nationals in the interior about two years ago.

Porous Borders

Therefore it is worth examining the likely challenges these portend for law enforcement. The fact that policing in Guyana is fraught with myriad difficulties not to mention resource constraints demands that a careful study be undertaken of this emergent phenomenon. Additionally, our porous borders tend to facilitate the influx of undocumented migrants from Guyana’s neighbours.

This in and of itself is an untenable situation in which we find ourselves, and where we expect much from our under-endowed law enforcement officers.

Ineffective Immigration Policies

It is incumbent upon the administration to revisit its approach to several issues, not least of which is the urgent recapitalisation of the disciplined services in consonance with the vibrant enforcement of an immigration policy that is relevant.

It is not hard to imagine who might have been blamed for the attempted robbery if the Lethem three had not been caught especially in our stagnant yet volatile political environment. Maybe the relevant ministry can tell us how many non-nationals have been documented in the past year. This question is important in view of the fact that large numbers of Brazilians and Chinese can be seen in almost all areas of this country.

Proliferation of Non-Nationals

The proliferation of non-nationals in this country should occasion some degree of unease since among them are likely to be those seen as undesirables even in their country of origin. Of course the more recent revelations that Guyana is home to a Mexican cartel operating in concert with the Italian Mafia, is sufficient to raise our apprehensions that not enough is being done to monitor inward migration trends.

The fact that we welcome foreign investors does not preclude the exercise of due diligence in view of the possibility that this country could be vulnerable to the influence of gangs including the Chinese triads. More to the point is that right next door is Brazil which has been particularly impacted by gangs and transnational organized crime which pose serious national security problems for the Brazilian authorities with the illegal trafficking of narcotics.

Can Guyana Cope?

The issue that arises is whether Guyana has the appropriate coping mechanisms in place to deal with the potential presence of Brazilian gangs whose very existence poses a threat to the country’s effective sovereignty.

The unimpeded flow of persons across national borders make countries like Guyana susceptible to transnational organized crime which also tend to undermine a state’s sovereignty, authority, and capacity to confront the perpetrators of certain crimes against the state. Non-state actors in the form of violent criminal enterprises compromise a government’s ability to perform its legitimizing functions.

Satellite of Brazilian gangs?

This is evident in the scale of execution-type murder, kidnapping, intimidation, corruption, and other means of coercion that are brought to bear upon public officials. All of this means that where these are allowed to go unchecked transnational gangs eventually appropriate to themselves portions of a nation’s territory, assuming and directly performing the tasks of government effectively operating as states within a state.

As a matter of extreme urgency the government must take all necessary steps to ensure that we do not become a satellite of Brazilian gangs like the Red Command, Friends of Friends, and the First Capital Command.

This brings another troubling aspect of transnational criminal enterprise into focus, and that is the will and willingness to come into conflict with the influence of unlimited funds. The current non-passage of the anti-money laundering legislation is showing to the world a seeming inclination to facilitate the beneficiaries of the illegal drug trade, and ultimately the sponsors of terrorism.

Commissioners for COI into Walter Rodney’s assassination sworn in

FEBRUARY 25, 2014 BY GINA

Three Caribbean jurists today took the Oath of Office before President Donald Ramotar as commissioners who will lead the inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of the late, Dr. Walter Rodney, a Guyanese historian and political activist, who was assassinated in Guyana in 1980.

Caribbean Jurists appointed

The three-member commission comprises top Barbadian attorney, Queen’s Counsel, Sir Richard Cheltenham, (the commission’s Chairperson), Queen’s Counsel Jacqueline Samuels-Brown from Jamaica and Senior Counsel Seenath Jairam from Trinidad and Tobago.

Rodney’s 33rd Death Anniversary

The establishment of the Commission of Inquiry (COI) was first made by President Ramotar in June last, on the occasion of Dr. Rodney’s 33rd death anniversary as per request by his family members.

The President said that it is the hope of the Government that the work and findings of this commission will bring conclusion to some of the outstanding issues surrounding Dr. Rodney’s assassination.

“They will advise how ready they are in the process of evidence gathering and how many witness statements they have prepared, and if not, how soon they are likely to have enough prepared so that the inquiry can be started,” the Chairperson said.

The commission is hoping to have over 100 witnesses coming forward in a process that will be open to the public and the press.

Meeting with GDF

Subsequent to the swearing in, the commissioners met with Police Commissioner, Leroy Brumell, Chief-of-Staff of the Guyana Defence Force (GDF), Brigadier Mark Phillips and members of the Private Sector Commission (PSC).

Dr. Rodney a political challenger to the then Forbes Burnham administration was killed on June 13, 1980 when an explosive device that was concealed in a walkie talkie radio detonated. The device was said to have been given to him by a former GDF Sergeant who later fled to French Guiana where he remained in exile until his death several years ago.

Overpayments, financial irregularities by Ministries at intolerable level – Goolsarran

Several Ministries have been hauled before the Public Accounts Committee (PAC) in recent weeks based on financial irregularities documented in the reports of the Auditor General (AG).

Overpayments to Contractors

The AG Report has shown that among some of the glaring financial irregularities, there were instances where millions of dollars in overpayments were made to contractors for work that was not completed. Considering this, Former Auditor General, Anand Goolsarran is calling for the implementation of an organized internal audit system to police the accounting systems of Ministries daily. This is in an effort to prevent some of the financial indiscretions.

Just recently senior officials of Region One Barima-Waini were summoned before the body based on the examination of the 2011 Auditor General Report. The PAC blamed the Regional officers for an engineer who approved the overpayment of $1M to add a new section to the Regional Administration Office at Mabaruma, which has not been done.

Previous reports said that the contract had been awarded to B. Boodhoo General Construction. The Regional Executive Officer (REO), Nigel Fisher, informed members of the Committee that the engineer, unfortunately, cannot be located.

Overpayment of salaries

Even the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Culture Youth and Sports, Mr. Alfred King, was made to face the music last month after an intense grilling by members of the Committee on the overpayment of salaries to staff members.

These monies are still to be recovered. According to the reports, 10 staff members were overpaid. King explained that rigid systems have been implemented since the incident. But he was unable to indicate whether the outstanding balance could be recovered.

Need for Accounting standards

PAC members from both the Government and the Opposition’s side have been extremely critical of the Permanent Secretaries and other representatives of the Ministries for the irregularities. They expressed clearly their disapproval for such intolerable behavior when monies are overpaid or cannot be found. In an invited comment, Goolsarran, a Financial Analyst said that based on these findings, it is a clear indication that there is a serious need for international accounting standards and an organized system of internal audit for the government agencies.

Firstly, Goolsarran explained that agencies of the state according to the Constitution have to be audited by the Auditor General (AG). [read more]
Keith Lowenfield, is new Chief Election Officer

March 13, 2014 - KNEWS

GEC Elections Commission (GECOM) has picked one of its top officials as the new Chief Elections Officer (CEO).

Keith Lowenfield is one of four persons shortlisted from 14 applications, GECOM confirmed yesterday. (March 12, 2014).

Lowenfield, a former army official, would have been given the nod ahead of Calvin Benn, the acting CEO who took over after the non-renewal of the contract of Gocool Boodoo early last year, but decided to pull out of the race earlier this month.

Benn and Lowenfield were among four shortlisted, along with Jamaican Danville Walker and Washington-based Savitrie Singh.

According to GECOM in a statement on the appointment, its Commissioners yesterday decided unanimously to appoint Lowenfield, said to be in his mid-50’s, as the new Chief Elections Officer and Commissioner of National Registration. The decision was taken at a special meeting of GECOM yesterday.

GECOM said that appointment would bring to an end “a very lengthy and meticulous procedure” associated with the matter including advertising the vacancy locally and overseas and the shortlisting of suitable candidates from the 14 applications received. It also involved determining the procedures for the interviews and the actual interviews.

GECOM said that Benn, who served as the acting CEO, was not interviewed because he tendered a letter earlier this month, “informing regretfully that he was no longer interested in the post of Chief Elections Officer and that, by way of the said letter, he was withdrawing his application for the post.”

Benn, according to GECOM, indicated that he had engaged in some serious reflection during a recent period of illness and had concluded that it would be unwise to compete for the position.

Following GECOM’s decision, Lowenfield was summoned to before the Commissioners and informed of his appointment. [Read more]

Corruption laws not effectively implemented in Guyana

US State Department Report

March 6, 2014 | BY KNEWS

Although the laws of Guyana provides for criminal penalties for corruption by officials, Government however, did not implement these effectively. This was one of the major concerns which were highlighted in the US Human Rights Report which was recently released by the State Department.

Corruption, according to the Report, remained a widespread public perception involving officials at all levels, including the police and the judiciary. Even the World Bank’s Worldwide Governance Indicators have assessed that Government corruption was a serious problem.

Even though under the Constitution, the Office of the Auditor General, Public Procurement Commission (PPC), and the Integrity Commission which all have mandated roles in the area of government transparency and accountability, two are yet to be established.

According to the Report, the Office of the Auditor General scrutinizes the expenditure of public funds on behalf of Parliament and conducts financial audits of all publicly funded entities, including donor-funded entities, local government agencies, and trade unions, and reports to the National Assembly.

It notes however, that the work and effectiveness of the Audit Office remained limited, since Government may or may not act on the discrepancies noted in its reports. Moreover, the Constitution has called for the establishment of a PPC to monitor public procurement and ensure that authorities conduct the procurement of goods and services in a fair, transparent, competitive, and cost-effective manner.

There has been significant public criticism of the present system’s ineffectiveness in awarding Government contracts in an equitable and transparent manner. Under pressure from Opposition parties in Parliament, the Government promised to establish the PPC by June 2012; however, it has not done so to date. [Read more]

Deplorable prison and jail conditions flagged in US State Dept Report

March 6, 2014 - KNEWS

The 2013 US Human Rights Report has not given Guyana a passing grade. The Report which was published last week, noted that the most serious human rights abuses involved suspects’ and detainees’ complaints of mistreatment by security forces, unlawful killings by police, and poor prison and jail conditions.

The Report said that other human rights problems included lengthy pretrial detentions, allegations of Government corruption, including police officials; excessive Government influence over the content of the national television network, and continued restrictions on radio licensing; sexual and domestic violence against women; abuse of minors; and laws that discriminate against Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender (LGBT) persons.

Even though torture and other cruel inhuman treatment are against the law, the Report noted that these activities still occurred. It was noted that in 2012 the Police Complainants Authority received 36 complaints of unnecessary use of violence. The media, according to the Report had highlighted several cases of random police brutality, arrest, and interrogation prior to investigation.

The Report singled out the Marudi police beating as one of the activities. “On March 2, police used force to clear protesters in the Marudi mining district and they allegedly used whips and sticks to beat local miners protesting their alleged unlawful removal from the area they claimed for their own use” the Report said.

It was noted that several protesters required medical treatment at a local hospital. On March 4, Natural Resources Minister Robert Persaud ordered an inquest into the alleged beatings by police. However as of October that inquest had not been performed.

Another incident of alleged police beating was on May 19, when Natasha Blackman claimed police tortured her into falsely admitting that she knew Chaka Chase, who the police alleged killed policeman Romain Cleto back in April. [Read more]

Road to Amaila Falls hydropower site nearly done

February 1, 2014 CND

The Amaila Falls Access road is on track to meet a March 2014 deadline, as it has reached a completion rate of 80 percent, 50 of which was done in 2013, Engineer attached to the Ministry of Public Works, Walter Willis told the media.

On Feb 1, Willis gave the completion rates for the various sections as: Section 2A-89 percent; Section 2B- 32 percent; Section 3- 73 percent, Section 4- 99 percent, Section 5- 98 percent, Section 6 - 55 percent and Section 7 (the longest) - 74 percent, Willis said.

He said that what remains now to be completed on the road is placing a total of 120 kilometres of laterite on all the sections, an aspect of the construction that is very dependent on the weather.

There is also 2.5km in Section 2, (close to the Essequibo River, in the swampy section) which is being worked on at present. Other outstanding work relating to the road is the incomplete construction of several bridges across the creeks. He said there are outstanding crossings at Kuribrong and Butukari.

The bridges that remain to be done are; in Section 2- two of green heart, in Section 6- one greenheart that at the end of December, 2013 was 50 percent completed, and in Section 7, one steel bridge. Work on the bridges is expected to be completed in March 2014, he said.

The current contractor on the roadway is China Railway in Section 7, Mekdec Machinery and Construction (MMC) in Section 2, Toolsie Persaud Quarries in Sections 3 and 4, Ivor Allen-Section 5, and Ivor Allen, and Dwarka Nauth Construction in Section 6.

The Kuirbrong bridge crossing is a separate contract from the roadway. Thus far, the design for this crossing has been completed by Dynamic Engineering, but funding has to be approved by the National Assembly, in order to move this aspect of the project forward.

Consideration is now on whether to have a fixed bridge or a pontoon crossing, while the annual maintenance manual is being compiled by consultant SRKN Engineering.

CONVIASA begins commercial flights to Guyana

February 15, 2014  Caribbean news Now

Guyana: CONVIASA launched its first commercial flight to Guyana on January 25, 2014.

The Venezuelan-based carrier is currently operating once weekly flights to Cheddi Jagan International Airport (CJIA) out of Puerto Ordaz, Venezuela, where a large Guyanese community is based. Additional flights will be added once the passenger demand increases.

“COVIASA’s entry to the Guyana’s aviation sector is a significant step for us,” stated Robeson Benn, minister responsible for transport. “It has always been our goal to have our travelling public undertake new regional connections at competitive prices.”

CONVIASA has been on a major expansion in Venezuela, South America and the Caribbean – Guyana is the airline’s 10th international destination.

CJIA’s chief executive officer (CEO) Ramesh Ghir stated that CONVIASA’s presence is one step closer in the ministry of public works/CJIA’s plan to transform the Timehri facility into the ‘next generation hub’.

On February 8, the airline brought in and carried out 53 passengers on its flight.

COPA Airlines may shake up Guyana's aviation sector

Commentary by By Ray Chickrie

In 2011, I penned a letter to the media urging the government of Guyana to enter negotiation with COPA airlines of Panama, a member of the global giant, Star Alliance, to fly to Guyana. This will soon become a reality. COPA will add Guyana to its vast international network on July 11, which may shake up the Guyana aviation sector.

This is a significant achievement for Guyana’s foreign minister, Carolyn Rodrigues-Birkett who played a pivotal role behind the scenes in getting COPA to enter the Guyana market.

COPA has 90 planes in its fleet, and 46 Boeing 737-NG on order, and has the support of the government of Panama and Tocumen Airport. It is one of the fastest growing and profitable airlines in the world. In addition, with a hub like Panama City connecting Guyanese to 60 cities worldwide, and without having to travel to the USA to connect to Latin America, Europe, and Asia, COPA's announcement of entering the Guyana market is welcome news for Guyanese travelers since KLM, British Airways, Air France and Pan Am left Guyana.

Tocumen Airport in Panama City has comfortable lounges, many restaurants and superb duty-free shops. Guyanese travelers who are accustomed to Piarco Airport in Trinidad will be impressed. Connections will be fast and convenient because COPA offers 300 flights daily to 60 cities in South and Central America, the Caribbean, and North America. As well, this service will link Guyana to Europe more conveniently.

Panama offers a hub outside of the United States that can connect travelers to and from Guyana easily to Asia, Europe and South America without the hassle and difficulty of securing a US transit visa. [Read more]

The Guyana Nurses Association (GNA) on Friday called on the Ministry of Health to stop taking in more students at nursing schools countywide until overcrowding and poor teaching and learning conditions are addressed.

“For some time now, we remained silent while the powers that be consciously or unconsciously manipulated all affairs and aspects of nursing bringing our profession to what it is today,” the association said in a statement.

The GNA also flayed the Health Ministry for improperly implementing a new curriculum at the Georgetown School of Nursing in 2010 with 500 students rather than at the Charles Roza School of Nursing in Region 10 as a pilot programme. The association recalled that the pilot should have been conducted at a smaller school in keeping with a recommendation by a Pan American Health Organisation (PAHO) consultant following a review. The GNA noted, however, that it was an un-reviewed draft curriculum that was implemented at all nursing schools as was instructed by the decision makers of the Ministry of Health.

Unlike the previous curriculum that had provided for two preliminary examinations, the PAHO model had continuous assessment that required clinical instructors and assessment tools; neither of which was put in place. The GNA said that led to the General Nursing Council introducing an Intermediate Examination to assess the level of competency of students.

The GNA lamented the shortage of clinical supervisors (part-time tutors) who assist students in clinical areas. Grave concern and outrage have been expressed by the GNA that the Ministry of Health was still enrolling students in the Schools of Nursing without meeting the stipulated criteria for implementation of the curriculum. “To date, three batches of students have since been enrolled in the three Schools of Nursing since the implementation of the current curriculum,” added the GNA.

The GNA recommended the cessation of intake until there is some form of stability and measures are put in place to remedy this situation so that unsuccessful students can be assisted. Other recommendations include a review draft curriculum currently being used by the schools, revisiting of the Procedure Manuals, recruitment and training of tutors, training and appointment of clinical instructors and the upgrading of skills lab.

The GNA is also demanding that the Ministry of Health and the Georgetown Public Hospital Corporation ink a Memorandum of Understanding for designated wards to be used for teaching/learning purposes. They must also be fully equipped with all necessary tools for learning, said the association. That recommendation has been made against the background of concerns that there has been reduced bed capacity at the GPHC since that medical institution has been “down sized” to approximately 450 total bed capacity. At the same time, the GNA noted that there has been an increase in the number of students competing with other health professionals such as medical students, Medex students, interns and other nursing students from private institutions, and the GPHC’s “full time” staff, for learning experience.

The removal of direct control of Nursing Schools by the Ministry of Health, the GNA said, must be removed and placed in the hands of Boards of Directors and all matters pertaining to nursing must be managed by the competent nursing administrators such as Director of Nursing/Matron, Principal Tutors) in the various institutions. Also being recommended are a review of Student Policy and the enrollment of smaller batches twice per year.

Other concerns that the GNA want addressed are inadequate number of trained full-time tutors, inadequate teaching/learning materials, need for full-time counselors, ill-equipped small skills lab, reduced time spent on specialized areas (reduced from 1 month to 2 weeks), inadequate lighting and ventilation in the classrooms, gross indiscipline of students, alarmingly high absenteeism rate and very poor punctuality.

Malaria Mosquito Control and Treatment in Guyana

Malaria is caused by parasites that are transmitted to people through the bites of infected mosquitoes. The vector-borne disease that affects the immune system of those infected, is the cause of thousands of deaths, worldwide, every year. Malaria mortality rates however, continue to fall as increased malaria prevention and control measures continue to dramatically reduce the impact of the disease.

In Guyana, efforts at combating the disease, driven through the Vector Control Services (VCS) of the Ministry of Health continue to bear fruit. According to the latest figures, for 2013, Guyana has seen a reduction by 15 percent in the number of malaria cases. There were 31,602 reported cases in 2012, as against 23,498 cases in 2013. The VCS is employing multiple interventions, but the prime focus remains, early diagnosis and treatment to prevent death.

Early Diagnostic and prompt treatments

The Hinterland locations, mainly regions mainly 1, 7, 8 and 9, continue to remain the most vulnerable to the disease. Within these regions, climatic and other conditions favour transmission. Transmission also occurs when people with low immunity move into the areas, for instance to find work and are negligent in taking protective measures such as sleeping under mosquito nets and using insect repellents.

The VCS concentrates most of its outreaches to these regions. For 2013, it conducted field visits encompassing entire villages, mining and logging camps.

Going into these malaria affected regions, the health workers, first look for the disease indicators. They either conduct a mass smearing (mass blood examination for malaria) or chose to, depending on their assessment of the situation, conduct a fever case survey (fever test to determine malaria,) and then determine if persons with a fever, will get a smear. All smears are conducted on site and persons diagnosed as having malaria are treated. [Read more]

Sophia youths benefit from adolescent health fair

February 25, 2014 GINA

The Ministry of Health through the Adolescent Department, in partnership with the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), recently hosted an interactive session and adolescent fair at the Sophia Health Centre, allowing youths to have access to youth friendly services in health education.

The fair which is one of many to be held in several other communities featured exhibits to educate both youths and their parents through photos, posters, brochures, magazines and artifacts.

Minister of Health Dr. Bheri Ramsaran, speaking to the adolescents, pointed out that youth friendly services should not be only confined to health centres, but that there should be further development for more health activities being carried out in the area for the benefits of the youths. ... despite ongoing unrests in Venezuela –
February 27, 2014 - KNEWS

Government says that its rice exports to neighbouring Venezuela will not be affected by ongoing unrests there which left several dead in riots.

The situation has raised worrying questions whether the multi-billion dollar oil-for-rice deal between the two countries will be threatened as Venezuelans are calling for President Nicolas Maduro to pull back the economy decline of that country.

Petro Caribe Deal

One of the areas Maduro is under pressure for is the Petro Caribe oil concessions with 17 states, including members of CARICOM. Under the deal, the countries are sold oil cheap under concessionary rates and with options to pay over a 20 year period.

On February 27, Agriculture Minister, Dr. Leslie Ramsammy disclosed that a new rice deal is in its final stages with exports to Venezuela expected to resume operation once all the logistics has been completed between the two Governments.

MOU signed for rice purchases

According to the Ministry of Agriculture, last week, a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA), was inked between La Casa, on behalf of the Venezuelan and Guyana’s Ambassador to Venezuela, Geoff Da Silva.

“We have made progress in completing arrangements for shipment of rice to begin. There are three stages in terms of the annual shipment of rice to Venezuela… at year-end, we have a period of reconciliation in order for Venezuela to issue payment to the Ministry of Finance,” Ramsammy said.

Last year, under the 2013 deal, Guyana had to deliver 140,000 tonnes of seed paddy and 70,000 tonnes of white rice, valued US$128.8M.

With the MOA already inked, the final stage of the Guyana/Venezuela agreement is near completion.

GAWU voices grave concern over sugar

-calls for revamped GuySuCo board

FEBRUARY 21, 2014 · BY STABROEK EDITOR · COMMENTS

The main sugar union GAWU, today expressed grave concern over the state of the sugar industry and urged the revamping of the GuySuCo board.

GAWU Republic Anniversary message

In its Republic Anniversary message, the Guyana Agricultural and General Workers Union said:

“From GAWU’s perspective the most negative occurrence in the recent history of the Republic is the real, clear and present danger to Guyana’s sugar industry which employs thousands of our members. The blame game can never restore the fortunes of this life line economic industry. A revamped GuySuCo board and management skill sets; motivation for harvesters and factory workers to returns to the fields and ancillary projects, among other things, all must combine to bring sugar back”.

While traditionally closely aligned to the PPP/C, GAWU has taken an increasingly critical and independent line over the government’s and GuySuCo’s handling of the industry. Years of poor sugar production and financial results and intractable problems at the intended flagship Skeldon factory have left analysts pondering the fate of the industry.

The union also called for political dialogue at the highest levels to settle the country’s problems in a move that would also be seen as a divergence from the PPP/C line that the opposition has behaved irresponsibly.

The union said:

“Elsewhere in the Republic GAWU sees the need for political dialogue at the highest levels to resolve differences affecting the productive management of the state, its resources and governance. Selfish “victories” should not prevent brilliant minds from both sides of the aisle, to bargain agreements to overcome parliamentary, budgetary, legislative or even judicial challenges. The 2011 electorate expects nothing less from our parliamentary legislators and political representatives.”

Chinese shipyard at Coverden opened

President Donald Ramotar addressing the opening of the Chinese owned Zhanghao Shipyard in Coverden, East Bank Demerara

Georgetown, GINA, February 28, 2014

Partnerships are indispensible to spurring Guyana to its fullest economic heights, and as such President Donald Ramotar today extended a welcoming hand to all Chinese investors.

The President was at the time addressing the opening of the Chinese owned Zhanghao Shipyard in Coverden, East Bank Demerara, and also the launch and naming ceremony for a logging vessel christened the ‘Yhan Heng freighter’. Also present were Prime Minister Samuel Hinds, Minister of Agriculture Dr. Leslie Ramsammy and Chinese Ambassador to Guyana Zhang Limin.

“I want to extend special greetings to the Chinese investors who have come here and to let them know that they are welcome in Guyana,” President Ramotar said.

The President noted that China has tremendous capabilities, evident by the tremendous progress that the country has made in just over three decades. China’s growth is also unmatched, when compared to equivalent countries in any part of the world, he said.

Yhan Heng freighter

Construction on the Zhanghao shipyard started in 2012, but it wasn’t until late 2013 that construction began on the vessel that was meant to facilitate the transport of logs from Kwakwani where the company owns a logging concession.

The vessel, whose design and engine are Chinese, and its steel plates pre-formed in China as well, has the capacity to carry 200,000 tonnes of logs and six crew members and will take about four days from Kwakwani to the shipyard in Coverden, laden with the logs. The vessel was constructed with efficiency and pace by the workers of the company with 95 per-cent of the work being completed in just over three months.

President Ramotar said that the Zhanghao investment has the potential to revitalise the local ship building which has declined in Guyana. “For me this is a really joyous occasion, because what we are seeing here is the expansion of our production capacity... this investment here will certainly help to stimulate other activities and allow the use of our rivers to cheapen transportation cost,” he said.
Analysts give Qualfon (Guyana) high marks

Qualfon, a leading business process outsourcing (BPO) and call center service provider, recently hosted two Frost & Sullivan analysts in Guyana.

The purpose of the visit was to enable Michael De-Salles, Principal Analyst with Frost & Sullivan’s Contact Center Group, and Stephen Loynd, Global Program Director, to see in person this emerging market in the business process outsourcing (BPO) industry and to allow them the opportunity to have open access to Qualfon’s contact center operations in Georgetown, the capital city of Guyana.

Getting to know Guyana

“We spent time getting to know Guyana and were impressed by what this country has to offer in terms of unique characteristics for outsourced services,” Loynd was quoted by PR Newswire as saying during his visit to Guyana. “What we found is that, indeed, Guyana is strategically positioned to be a major player. Because Guyana’s population speaks English as a first language, has a high cultural affinity to the USA, has a high literacy rate, and offers a cost structure that directly competes with India and the Philippines, it provides a real opportunity.”

Meetings with Qualfon Executives

The analysts met with Qualfon executives and toured three of its locations, including two existing centers and the future site of Qualfon’s contact center campus, which will employ 6,000 people and be one of the world’s largest contact center operations.

“Qualfon gave us access to their operations, management team, and customer service agents. We listened to calls and then had a focus group with just the agents. I was very impressed with their customer service skills. The English is very neutral and there was no apparent language or cultural barrier in our discussions. The agents also had a passion for both their jobs and a strong loyalty to Qualfon,” said De-Salles. “Qualfon is becoming a serious BPO contender, and when potential buyers approach them, they will come to understand how Qualfon’s high agent retention rates provide a higher quality service at a lower price. This is a very big part of an attractive value proposition. Also, their massive strategic investments in Guyana make it clear that Qualfon is committed to driving high growth in this market.

Meeting with Government Minister

“During the visit, Qualfon also introduced the analysts to Guyana’s Minister of Finance, Dr. Ashni Kumar Singh M.P. They also had meetings with representatives from GO-Invest, the government-backed organization that provides tax breaks and assistance to foreign investors. “We enjoyed the friendly and open discussion we had with Minister Signh,” said Loynd. “He is very knowledgeable about the BPO industry and is actively supporting its growth in Guyana. He also stated that Qualfon has been a valuable partner for Guyana and its people, and it is leading the way for future development.”

“We were so glad that Stephen and Michael were able to join us in Guyana to see the country and experience Qualfon operations firsthand,” said Brian Kearney, V.P. of Marketing at Qualfon. “We coordinated their visit at the same time as our company leadership summit in Guyana, so they could also spend some quality time with our executive leadership team. It was great for our executives to get Stephen and Michael’s perspective on industry trends, and being able to understand how Qualfon’s mission to ‘be the best BPO and make people’s lives better’ embraced across our entire organization.”

Strong Track record

Qualfon has a strong track record of customer service and back-office processing growth with experienced business processing outsourcing (BPO) leadership. We have been serving our BPO clients since our founding in 1996, and today, we are 10,000 employees serving an international base of clients. Qualfon operates in the Philippines, Guyana, Mexico, the United States, and China. Our mission is “Be the Best BPO. Make People’s Lives Better.” Qualfon invests in the well-being of our people who, in return, are taking better care of customers, clients, and communities. Our employee tenure is twice the industry average, which enables us to offer highly skilled and highly engaged people that provide a better customer experience. In addition, our lower employee attrition and strategic locations enable us to provide our services at a lower cost. http://www.Qualfon.com
